Call for Nominations

Whittier College alumni made history in the spring of 1995 with the first election of alumni trustees—Kristine Dillon '73 and Stuart Gothold '56. Almost 19% of Whittier College alumni participated in that historic event, and the Office of Alumni Relations is now in the process of collecting nominations for the next ballot.

The Committee on Trustees expects all trustees to fulfill, whenever possible, these requirements:

- be committed to private higher education and especially the ideals of education found at Whittier College;
- become informed about the mission, plans, goals and programs of the college;
- prepare for, attend and participate in Board of Trustees meetings, which are held three times a year in October, February and May;
- be available for advice and counsel to the Whittier College President and the Chairman of the Board;
- be willing to make a financial contribution to the college, particularly for annual unrestricted support, according to his or her means;
- inform others about the college, with particular emphasis on future students, potential board members, and prospective donors.

All Whittier College alumni are eligible to vote, and any alumna or alumnus of the college who meets the minimum qualifications may be nominated. Alumni may nominate someone or apply themselves.

All nominations will be reviewed by a committee from the Alumni Association that will then recommend a slate of candidates to the Committee on Trustees. All of this is done under the jurisdiction of the Office of Advancement working under the delegation from the Committee on Trustees.

If you would like to offer a nomination, please submit a letter stating why you want to serve as an alumni trustee, or why you feel your nominee would be a worthy candidate, and enclose a resumé. Nominations should be sent to: Whittier College, Office of Alumni Relations, P.O. Box 634, Whittier, CA 90608, and must be submitted by May 1, 1997.

President's Corner

Dear friends of the college:

While looking through some historical photos of the Poet campus recently, I came across an artist's rendering of the Greater Whittier College Plan, a proposal for campus development that was announced in 1917, during President Absalom Rosenberger's administration. The plan called for construction of a new library, auditorium, administration building, dining hall and observatory, as well as four dormitories, three tennis courts, and various drives and gateways. The rendering shows a tidy, architecturally harmonious campus, with buildings placed almost symmetrically along a central axis leading up the hill and ending at the proposed observatory.

Unfortunately, reality is seldom as tidy or harmonious as we'd like it to be. President Rosenberger and the board of trustees launched a $250,000 capital campaign to build this Greater Whittier College, but less than a month after the campaign announcement, the United States entered World War I. The fund-raising effort ended with just $100,000 pledged, and only one building, Naylor Hall, was constructed. The rest of the money was used to keep the college afloat as the war brought declining enrollments and rising costs.

Many of the proposed facilities were eventually built over the next 80 years, but with far less coherence in architectural style than was originally planned. Today, many of us who love the college see that lack of architectural coherence as one of Whittier's greatest challenges.

We are fortunate to have several wonderful historical structures that can be used as templates for future campus development. Architectural details found on the Mendenhall Building are echoed in the design of one of Whittier's newest facilities, the Ruth B. Shannon Center for the Performing Arts. Platner Hall, with its red tile roof, and Wardman Hall, with its tall welcoming arches, are also among the college's most distinctive old buildings. And Naylor Hall, the sole product of that early campaign, is Whittier's signature building, with graceful Monterey-style archways that are reflected in the college's nameplate.

It is indeed fitting that renovation of Naylor Hall is the first capital project to be funded through The Campaign for Whittier College. Through the successes of this campaign, we can honor the vision and ambition of President Rosenberger and the trustees of 1917, who saw a marvelous future for their college on the hill. Although today's Whittier College doesn't look much like the sketch in the college archives, I think the early planners would be proud of what it has become, and would be as excited as we are to see what the future will bring.

News in Brief

New Business Institute Will Put Liberal Arts to Work

Liberal arts students participating in Whittier's inaugural Summer Business Institute will have an opportunity like no other offered in the United States: to gain valuable internship experience while learning how to apply their liberal arts backgrounds to the working world.

"We hear from executives that graduates of liberal arts colleges have the kinds of skills they need to succeed in business," says Mary Casey Finan, associate professor of business administration and the institute's director. "They learn quickly, they know how to think across disciplines, and they have a broad knowledge base. This institute is designed to expose liberal arts students to business disciplines while giving them the kind of practical experience that will help them get that first job."

Whittier's institute will be the only summer business program offered west of the Mississippi, and the only one in the country to include an internship experience. The program was established with the help of the First Interstate Foundation and the Murdy Foundation.

The institute, which will run from June 20 to August 8, is open to students from any liberal arts institution. For more information, call (562) 907-4256, or visit the institute's World Wide Web site at <http://www.whittier.edu/sbi/businesssummer.html>.

Credit Card Offer Coming

Watch your mailbox for information about the MBNA MasterCard program. Since the program was introduced in 1994, almost 1,000 alumni and students have signed up for the credit card, which provides a contribution to the Alumni Association or Student Alumni Association every time the card is used for a purchase.

FOR THE RECORD

The last issue of The Rock listed an incorrect date for the Purple & Gold Golf Tournament. The event is scheduled for March 31. For more information, call Paul Bryeans '55 at (562) 693-5583 or Tom Hall '49 at (562) 695-3850.

SUSAN ROBERTSON '98

Skeleton figures rise as the sun sets on Whittier's first Dia de los Muertos (Day of the Dead) celebration, held November 1. The traditional Mexican holiday, based on customs of the country's early inhabitants, celebrates the memory of deceased loved ones. Students and faculty from the art and modern languages departments collaborated to create masks, altars and other tributes to the dead, including special altars for Grateful Dead lead singer Jerry Garcia and the first-graders killed by a gunman in Dunblane, Scotland.

Student Alumni Association Back in Business

After several years of inactivity, the Student Alumni Association has returned and already planned a full slate of activities. Designed to promote interaction between current students and alumni, and to encourage students to maintain strong ties to Whittier after graduation, the group boasts 40 new members. Fall semester activities included a "Political Poets Past and Present" discussion group and "Dinner With a Few Friends," in which alumni opened their homes to students and fellow alumni.

Wall Street Journal

Students of Stephen R. Goldberg, the Roy E. and Marie G. Campbell Professor of Biology, were mentioned in November for their studies of deformed frogs found in Minnesota. Goldberg and his students, who are studying possible causes of the deformities, were also featured in the Los Angeles Times, Orange County Register, Stockton (Calif.) Record, Whittier Daily News, Pasadena Star-News and San Gabriel Valley Daily Tribune.

Los Angeles Times

Bob Blechen '56 was profiled in October, when he was featured in an NFL documentary broadcast on Turner Network Television. Blechen, who still plays semi-pro football at the age of 61, was also mentioned in Sports Illustrated, the Dallas Morning News, the Buffalo (N.Y.) News, the New Orleans Times-Picayune and the Tulsa (Okla.) World.

KABC-TV (Los Angeles)

Vann Priest, assistant professor of physics, explained in a December story how the laws of physics work in Santa's favor as he makes his Christmas Eve rounds. Priest also discussed his theories about the jolly old elf with the Los Angeles Times and on KCAL-TV, KNX Newsradio, KBIG-FM and KMPC-AM (all in Los Angeles), and KPQ radio (Wenatchee, Wash.)

Avenue Magazine

Trustee William H. Marumoto '57 was one of the "500 Most Influential Asian Americans" profiled in the magazine's November issue.

Associated Press

I. Nelson Rose, professor of law, was quoted in October about a Louisiana ballot measure to end legalized gambling. The story appeared in papers across the nation. Rose was also featured in a November Associated Press story about Donald Trump.

Dallas Morning News

Rafael Chabrán, associate professor of Spanish language and literature, was featured in an October story about The Latino Encyclopedia, which has been generating media attention since last summer. The six-volume reference work, co-edited by Chabrán and his brother, Richard, also made headlines in the Corpus Christi (Texas) Caller-Times, the Pittsburgh Post-Gazette and the Orlando Sentinel.

Washington Times

Frank Beckwith, assistant professor of philosophy, and his experience at a pre-election debate were discussed in a November op-ed piece. Beckwith was invited to speak at Cal State Los Angeles in favor of Proposition 209, California's anti-affirmative action ballot measure, and was met with raucous opposition. "Mr. Beckwith learned that, despite current claims of diversity, tolerance and multiculturalism on campus, he was a member of the wrong [race]," wrote the column's author.

Orlando Sentinel

Maurine Behrens, professor of psychology and director of the Whittier Scholars Program, was quoted in a December story on making the holidays enjoyable for relatives with Alzheimer's and their caregivers.

Law School Receives Gift

Moving a law school from one county to another isn't a simple task, but a $500,000 gift from the Segerstrom family will make Whittier Law School's transition from Los Angeles County to Orange County quite a bit smoother.

The Segerstrom family owns and manages the South Coast Plaza shopping center in Costa Mesa, the city in which Whittier Law School will be operating beginning this fall. The faculty reading room in the law school's new library will be named in recognition of the family's generosity.

Area Code Changed

Whittier College's area code has been changed from 310 to 562. Until July 26, your call will be forwarded automatically if you dial the old area code, but after that date, you must use 562.

African American Alumni Association Forming

A new group for African American alumni has held its first meeting and is hoping to increase its membership ranks. Stephanie Wiggins '92 provided the impetus for the group's formation, and members have set goals of raising scholarship funds, recruiting African-American students, and encouraging alumni interaction with current students. To join the association, call the Office of Alumni Relations at (562) 907-4222.

Student Group is First in Nation

Since December, Whittier College has boasted the United States' first student chapter of the Organisation Mondiale Pour L'education Prescolaire (OMEP). OMEP, which was established in Prague, Czechoslovakia, after World War II, is an international non-governmental organization that works for child rights and child welfare throughout the world.

One of the chapter's first projects was a presentation on "The Politicization of Children and Childhood" at the March meeting of the California Association for the Education of Young Children. The group is also working to establish a project to support child welfare and children's rights in the Whittier area. ■

I Never Thought

Proof that a Whittier education prepares you for just about anything.

BY THEA MAKOW

ALEX OGINSZ

Corinne (Linger) Zachay '39 poses outside her wedding chapel before a ceremony.

Remember getting the advice, "What you need is a good liberal arts education"? Most chose Whittier because it offers just that—a solid base that can lead to almost any profession. The alumni roster includes politicians, priests and pediatricians. They have jobs running the gamut from aerobics instructor in New Delhi to special effects artist in Hollywood—jobs that often seem completely unrelated to their college majors. What makes a biology student become an expert in home remodeling, or a business student turn out to be an environmental activist? The answers to these questions vary as much as the unique personalities of Whittier alumni.

I'd End Up Here!

"The patience of Job"

Corinne (Linger) Zachay '39 is an education major who marvels at how she and her husband, Elmer, ended up running a wedding chapel in El Cajon, Calif. She thinks touring with the Whittier Gospel Team, a group that performed and spoke at churches all over the state promoting the college, was not only a great deal of fun, but also relates to her present career. It was with the Gospel Team that she got some early practice at boosting something she believed in—a skill she now applies to her chapel. A serious businesswoman, Zachay carries a cellular phone, takes out ads in the local paper, and has a glowing description of her chapel ready for anyone who calls.

"We just love our work," Zachay crows. "We're gonna work 'til we drop." The spy one-time kindergarten teacher proudly calls attention to a jumble of photographs and thank-you notes posted on the wall of her little pink and white chapel. There's a picture of a couple who rode in on a Harley-Davidson for their wedding, as well as a heartfelt note from a newly married prison inmate. The Zachays once conducted a ceremony for a member of the Barrymore family of celebrated actors, and have overseen a surfer wedding, a karate-themed wedding, and even a surprise wedding at which the bride was completely oblivious to her boyfriend's plans until a pen and a marriage certificate were handed to her (a tactic Zachay does not recommend).

"You need the patience of Job," she remarks, to deal effectively with some customers. But patience and understanding overflow from this well-traveled and thoughtful woman. When asked what she thinks of marrying convicts behind the protective glass of prisons, she responds, "Those boys are treated so poorly in there! They deserve a little happiness."

Michael O'Dell '78 leads one of his hoofed friends, Worry 'n' Wonder, to the stables.

"You can never win enough"

"I never thought I'd be doing this," admits racehorse bloodstock agent Michael O'Dell '78. But he obviously took to the infectious rhythm of his work. "I love the five minutes before the race and the two minutes during the race. You can never win enough."

Leaning an elbow against a fence bordering the turf at Santa Anita Racetrack in Arcadia, Calif., O'Dell speculates on how he got to be who he is today—an accomplished manager and agent coordinating investment groups, advising on purchases and then overseeing racehorses' careers. His major at Whittier was political science, and while he admits that an understanding of public policy could only have helped his work in the state-regulated business, he attributes more to the Whittier philosophy of "relationships."

Since a great majority of O'Dell's work involves putting together small groups of people and gaining their trust before investing in a horse, much of his job harks back to the interactive skills he honed at Whittier.

I Never Thought

"I came from a small, really sheltered town," O'Dell recalls. He stops to gaze at a sweaty horse thundering by. "But in college I met so many different kinds of people, and I got an understanding of them." O'Dell says he gained a helpful flexibility living at Whittier, and his appreciation of the college held up well enough that he's encouraging his partners to name their promising filly "Poet Miss."

"Pounding rivets in Wardman"

For some alumni, it's more difficult to pinpoint what it was about Whittier that contributed to their life-paths. Loren Woirhaye '94 was an English major and is now a meticulous craftsman specializing in custom African-style drums. Is there any connection between his college experience and his profession?

Woirhaye, leaning forward and staring off into a living room adorned with drums of all shapes and sizes, answers, "I remember pounding rivets in Wardman Hall." That was when he learned his first craft, leather-working. He's thankful that Whittier offered an environment where he could "do his own thing" and find other creative people interested in Medieval revivalism, providing him with a venue for his hand-made leather costumes. His English major also engendered the skill of learning easily from books. Woirhaye has learned a great deal about his craft from the written word, and hopes to author his own book one day about African-style drums.

A perfectionist who works out of a sawdust-carpeted Whittier garage cluttered with various power saws, sanders and planing devices, Woirhaye explains a technique of cutting hardwoods that, he asserts, not only ensures the quality of his drums, but also allows him to make more of them. With an impish sideways glance, he boasts, "Other drum makers do what I do; few do it as efficiently." Perhaps confidence is one of the important lessons Whittier's nurturing environment provided the young artisan.

Clarifying the thought process

Analytical skills were the important lessons Whittier taught Marilyn Carne-Smith '72, once a biology major. Now she's an expert in home remodeling with a published workbook and her own company in Costa Mesa, Calif. Surprisingly, she has no trouble connecting her studies at Whittier with the business of home construction. She attributes her current success to one particular Whittier course, Design for Thinking, a core program required for more than three decades of Whittier students.

"It was the best class I ever took in my entire life," Carne-Smith enthuses. "It taught me organization skills. It clarified the thought process." Her paired biology courses at Whittier elaborated upon theories taught in Design for Thinking, she says, sharpening her ability to organize and analyze accurately.

Referring to the home-remodeling ordeal that inspired the creation of her company, she lets out a laugh and says, "Now I live in my dream home after going through nine months of sheer disaster. I want to keep other homeowners from going through what I did." With years of sales and marketing experience obtained after leaving Whittier, the one-time biology major is fully equipped to take on the competitive and sometimes male-dominated world of contracting. Advising other ready-to-remodel homeowners on how to plan, budget, and hire contractors, she speaks at League of California Homeowners events all over the state with presentations based on the Design for Thinking course—even using diagrams similar to the ones used in class.

“Find things that don’t have answers”

Making a concise presentation is also critical in the work of Elden Hughes '53, and when Hughes is behind a cause, nothing less than an audience with the President of the United States will do. Positions like chairman of the Sierra Club's California Desert Committee and director of the California Desert Protection League make him a primary spokesperson for endangered wildlife and Native American historical sites. Hughes says of the desert: “If you come here and do not feel the spirituality, your soul is dead.”

He and his wife, Patty, who live in Whittier, have made numerous trips to Washington, D.C., with their desert tortoises to drum up support for preservation of California's deserts, and Hughes recently led a tour for a superintendent of the National Park System. He showed her such precious Mojave Desert jewels as the Rebirthing Site, which he describes as “an opening in a rock worn smooth from 10,000 Indian knees.”

Hughes started out at Whittier as a business administration major, but since Whittier's core program encourages interdisciplinary study, he soon found he was interested in a lot more than the business side of life. “I took a semester of geology and then added it to my other major.” By the time he graduated—with honors—he had four majors. He muses, “That's how you get involved. Find things that don't have answers and follow them. Whittier did provide a lot of answers, but also the tools to find answers.”

For Hughes, it was a calling to get involved where he was needed; for Zachay, it was a warm style of outreach and working with all kinds of people. For O'Dell, it was the confidence to form high-stakes business relationships; for Woirhaye, a supportive environment in which to develop unique extracurricular skills; and for Carne-Smith, an ability to organize and analyze well. The one thing these different individuals have in common is a seed planted and nurtured at Whittier. No matter how twisted the winding vine of life may have become, Whittier provided support and guidance during that critical period of personal development. ■

Why Not Go Home Again?

New homecoming events bring alumni back to campus.

What does it take to build a better homecoming? How do you attract and entertain a spectrum of alumni so broad it includes graduates who have been out of school for more than 50 years—and those who left just a few months ago?

Homecoming '96 attempted to answer those questions by combining several new events with the traditional class reunions, society brunches and pre-game barbecue. There were a few hits and a few misses, but almost 1,000 alumni and friends attended—not including those at the football game on Saturday night.

"We had a lot of people show up, the visibility to the campus and community was great, and we had more interaction with students this year," said Christine (Reel)

Nelson '72, director of alumni relations.

Hits included two welcoming receptions on Friday night—one for donors and volunteers at the Garrett Faculty Master House, and another for all alumni at the Whittier Hilton.

"And we definitely will do the alumni farewell brunch in the Campus Inn on Sunday again," Nelson said. "People were lined up when the doors opened at 10 a.m."

"Meet Under the Tent," a new event featuring games for children and adults and a concert by the Free Range Chickens (featuring the talents of alumni Kitt Clark '89 and Byron Schatz '86), drew around 200 visitors.

RICH CHEATHAM '88

Children of alumni frolic in the Dino Jump and bouncing slides, part of the carnival-like atmosphere designed to bring families back to Whittier.

"The tent event is going to be very popular as more people hear about it," predicted Nelson. "The kids just had a ball, and I heard from a lot of alumni who really appreciated having a homecoming event that their families could enjoy."

Another new event that organizers hope will pick up steam in coming years is the "First Ten" reunion, a combined gathering for alumni who graduated within the last 10 years. This year's reunion drew a small but spirited crowd to the newly renovated Club.

Plans are already under way for Homecoming '97, which could very well feature an afternoon football game and fewer class reunions. The classes of '57 and '72 are considering holding their next reunions earlier in the year.

"If we completely separate reunions from homecoming," Nelson said, "alumni wouldn't have to make so many choices between conflicting events."

The idea is to eventually make homecoming a "come one, come all" occasion with a convocation, dinner and departmental events in which alumni of all ages could mingle, says Nelson.

For most folks, including Geoff Shepard '66, the biggest draw at homecoming is the possibility of seeing old friends. He moved east after graduation and only returns to Whittier for reunions. "After just 15 minutes, it is like you never left the campus," he said. "I even saw a few people here this time whom I had not seen in 30 years. I also loved the new events, because one dinner on Saturday night does not give you much opportunity to really catch up."

As they gear up for next year, planners agree that homecoming will always be a work in progress. "I've been involved in homecoming before, but this year was different," said Penny (Carns) Fraumeni '68, chair of the planning committee. "Some things worked, some things need some fine-tuning. But each event has its own flavor, and that's what makes homecoming special." ■

The homecoming planning committee would like to hear from you. If you have any suggestions for next year's homecoming at Whittier, call the Office of Alumni Relations at (562) 907-4222.

Making a Comeback

Restoring Whittier's signature building to its former glory will be the first capital project funded through The Campaign for Whittier College

By Kristin Tranquada

In the 1920s, Naylor Hall echoed with the clinking of beakers and hissing of Bunsen burners. Half a century later, the sounds of the chemistry lab were replaced by those of art studios and a basement theater. And in 1990, Naylor Hall fell silent.

The Spanish-style building, which had survived major and minor earthquakes and the 1968 fire that destroyed its neighbor, Founders Hall, was finally conquered by modern building codes. Its unreinforced masonry construction and antiquated design made Naylor a potential hazard in the event of another large quake, and in an era of tight funds, resources just weren't available for the kind of major renovation required to bring Naylor up to code.

But lately, thanks to a grant from the Ahmanson Foundation, Naylor has been showing new signs of life. The $1.5 million grant will fund the renovations necessary to open the building's doors to students once again.

Plans call for reconfiguring Naylor's space to house the Department of Modern Languages and Literatures, providing classrooms, faculty offices and a language laboratory. ■

STEVE BURNS

A sign on the door still announces the last class to meet in Naylor 101, the building's largest classroom.

BONNIE BELL WARDMAN LIBRARY COLLECTION

A late 1940s view of Naylor, as seen from the Quad. Founders Hall looms in the background; at left is Provident Hall. Of the three buildings, only Naylor is still standing.

Founders Hall went up in flames on Friday the 13th of December, 1968, but Naylor Hall (at right) was unscathed. The burned tree at lower right shows how close Naylor came to meeting a fiery end.

Naylor Hall, shown here shortly after its completion in 1918, was built for about $32,000. Funds for its construction were raised during the previous year's Greater Whittier College Campaign. Named for college trustee Addison W. Naylor, the building was designed as a chemistry facility by the prominent Los Angeles firm of Allison and Allison.

The 1996 Leadership

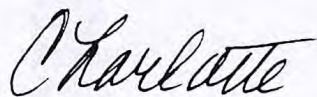

Dear Members of the Whittier College Family:

I am pleased to formally acknowledge herein the many leadership donors and volunteers who give their time, talent and treasure to Whittier College. Deluged as we all are, on a daily basis, by many worthy requests—all competing for our limited financial resources—it is gratifying indeed to know that so many members of the college community put Whittier at or near the top of their philanthropic priorities.

Many of you will notice a change in the format of the following Leadership Donor Report as compared to the traditional annual Honor Roll of Donors and Volunteers that has been featured in this space in the past. This year's report covers the period from July 1, 1995 through June 30, 1996 and includes only John Greenleaf Whittier Society-level ($1,000 and above) donors. Corporate and foundation contributors, Philadelphians, named scholarships and top volunteers in the many important college support groups are listed as well. The Honor Roll, with a full accounting of all donors, will return in its customary format in the Fall, 1997 issue of The Rock.

On behalf of the college, I again offer thanks to all of you who support Whittier on a continuing basis.

Sincerely,

Charlotte D. Graham
Chair, Current Gifts Campaign,
Endowing the Tradition
Member, Whittier College Board of Trustees

THE JOHN GREENLEAF WHITTIER SOCIETY

The John Greenleaf Whittier Society is Whittier College's premier gift club. JGWS is the foundation for Whittier's fund-raising efforts and plays a crucial role in making a Whittier College education possible for its many deserving students. In the last three years alone, giving from JGWS members has increased by nearly 40%. The college owes an immense debt of gratitude to these donors, who are committed to the mission of providing a quality education to those with intellectual curiosity. For more information, please contact Nancy Gonzalez '96 at (562) 907-4288.

MATCHING GIFT COMPANIES

Under a corporate matching gift program, gifts made by a company's eligible employees are matched with company or corporate foundation funds. This program enables non-profit organizations such as Whittier College to receive increased financial support, while encouraging corporate employees to engage in philanthropy. Below, we acknowledge the individuals and corporations who have taken advantage of matching gift programs at or above the $1,000 level. For information about your company's matching program, please contact your human resources department, or the college at (562) 907-4214.

I can look back 39 years to the time when I started as a freshman at Whittier College or five years ago when I joined the Board of Trustees, and one thing remains constant—the need for scholarships for deserving students. Through four decades scholarships remain a precious resource; the supply is never enough to satisfy demand.

I received scholarship support as an undergraduate, and Barbara and I are fortunate to be able to give something back to Whittier by creating an endowed scholarship. We place tremendous value on a liberal arts education and we have seen firsthand how difficult it is for many to afford a good college. We believe in the virtue of helping deserving students and encourage others to support the college's endowed and restricted scholarships.

"I am so glad I went to Whittier. It was exactly right for me. Many of us were first-generation college students and were poor, but we were nurtured by the faculty. They cared and they were interested in us, and that caring extended beyond the classroom and beyond graduation."

SCHOLARSHIPS AT WHITTIER COLLEGE

Endowed Scholarships

A Whittier education would not be attainable for many of our most qualified students without the continuing availability of scholarship assistance. Students are automatically considered for these scholarships through the admission and financial aid application processes. Whittier College wishes to recognize the individuals, corporations, and foundations that so generously support our students by having established the following endowed scholarship funds.

"I was comfortable with Whittier, with the personality of the institution and the way of teaching. The whole work and lifestyle of Whittier brought out the best in me. I've come to the conclusion that I was much better prepared for my life than if I had gone to Harvard or Yale, where my experience would have been less personal and familial."

Philanthropy is for everyone.

It doesn't take great wealth to be a philanthropist. I could never be considered wealthy; comfortable, yes, but still an average, middle-class person. But I still have the ability to be a philanthropist, and so do many people like me. No gift is too small.

When I made my living trust, I decided to leave everything to charity, because I have very little family and they are all able to care for themselves. I included Whittier College because I received a fine education here, and also had individual attention from a dedicated faculty.

I made a unitrust of a small rental property, and I have never done anything that made me feel better. I receive a lifetime income from the trust that is equal to (or even more than) the rent I would have received, and I also received substantial tax benefits.

As a result of this gift, much joy has come to me. I encourage everyone to do their giving while they are alive, if possible, and enjoy the pleasure of seeing their gifts used.
